The graph displays two curves on a grid. The upper curve starts at a high y-value on the left and slopes downward, passing through the horizontal axis at approximately the 6th vertical grid line from the left. The lower curve starts at a lower y-value on the left and slopes downward more steeply, intersecting the upper curve at approximately the 6th vertical grid line from the left, which is also where the upper curve crosses the horizontal axis. The lower curve continues to slope downward, crossing the horizontal axis at approximately the 10th vertical grid line from the left.
