The graph displays two linear functions on a coordinate plane with a grid. The x-axis and y-axis both range from 0 to 10, with grid lines every 1 unit. Two lines are plotted, both with negative slopes.

- The upper line passes through the points $(0, 10)$ and $(10, 0)$. Its equation is $y = -x + 10$.
- The lower line passes through the points $(0, 6)$ and $(6, 0)$. Its equation is $y = -x + 6$.

The two lines are parallel, with a constant vertical distance of 4 units between them.

The graph is plotted on a grid with a horizontal axis from 0 to 10 and a vertical axis from 0 to 10. Two curves are shown:

- The upper curve is concave, starting at (0, 10) and ending at (10, 0). It passes through the point (4, 4).
- The lower curve is convex, starting at (0, 4) and ending at (10, 0). It also passes through the point (4, 4).

The two curves intersect at the point (4, 4).
